Title	Terminator, The
Original title	Terminator, The
Poster
Director	James Cameron
Country	USA
Genre	action
Year	1984
Length	108
Rating	Excellent
Description	A young woman named Sarah Connor is inexplicably being hunted by a relentless killer who is apparently tracking down and killing women who share Connor's name. She is eventually approached by Kyle Reese, played by Michael Biehn, who explains that in the future, an artificial intelligence called "Skynet" will be created by military software developers to make strategic decisions, but unexpectedly becomes self-aware. In a panic, the human creators attempt to shut Skynet down. In the interest of self-preservation, Skynet seizes control of most of the world's military hardware and launches an all-out thermonuclear attack on humanity, leading to a total war between human and machine. However, a man named John Connor eventually leads the human resistance to victory, only to discover that in a last-ditch effort, Skynet had discovered time travel and sent a Terminator, a highly advanced robotic killer, back in time to the 1980s to kill John Connor's mother before he can be born. John Connor sends Reese, a trusted lieutenant, back in time to protect Sarah from the Terminator at all costs.

Title	Metropolis
Original title	Metropolis
Poster
Director	Fritz Lang
Country	Germany
Genre	science-fiction
Year	1927
Length	123
Rating	OK
Description	The film is set in the year 2026, in the extraordinary Gothic skyscrapers of a corporate city-state, the Metropolis of the title. Society has been divided into two rigid groups: one of planners or thinkers, who live high above the earth in luxury, and another of workers who live underground toiling to sustain the lives of the privileged. The city is run by Johhan 'John' Fredersen (Alfred Abel).
Comments	There are multiple versions of Metropolis. The original German version remained unseen for many decades. Of this version, a quarter of the footage is believed to be permanently lost. The U.S. version, shortened and re-written by Channing Pollock, is the most commonly known and discussed.

Title	Ghostbusters
Original title	Ghostbusters
Poster
Director	Ivan Reitman
Country	USA
Genre	science-fiction comedy
Year	1984
Length	107
Rating	Excellent
Description	Three unemployed parapsychology professors (recently kicked out of Columbia University in New York) start a business called Ghostbusters, a spectral investigation and removal service armed with technology of their own design that can track down and capture supernatural entities with relative ease.
Comments	In the middle of the film's initial release, to keep interest going, Ivan Reitman had a trailer run, which was basically the commercial the Ghostbusters' use in the movie, but with the 555 number replaced with a 1-800 number, allowing people to call. They got a recorded message of Bill Murray and Dan Aykroyd saying something to the effect of "Hi. We're out catching ghosts right now." They got 1,000 calls per hour, 24 hours a day, for six weeks.

Title	The Silence of the Lambs
Original title	The Silence of the Lambs
Poster
Director	Jonathan Demme
Country	USA
Genre	thriller
Year	1991
Length	118
Rating	Outstanding
Description	The movie opens with the FBI in a desperate search to find a vicious serial killer dubbed Buffalo Bill, who is abducting women in the south and skinning them. Jack Crawford, the head of the FBI's behavioral science unit, asks his brightest pupil, Clarice Starling, to present a VICAP questionnaire to a brilliant forensic psychiatrist turned cannibalistic serial murderer named Hannibal Lecter, who was serving nine consecutive life terms at a Baltimore mental facility. Lecter had solved several serial killer cases for Crawford prior to his conviction as one himself, and Crawford is convinced that Lecter's insight could help capture Buffalo Bill.
Comments	Despite the acclaim garnered for the role, Anthony Hopkins is only in the film for a little over 16 minutes.
